VETERAMA Mannheim: 13 - 15 October 2023

Europe's biggest and most iconic classic car market has been restored to its former size after a number of difficult years.

The international classic car scene will be meeting up in the city where the automobile was invented back in 1885 for a three-day-long celebration of "the world's rustiest hobby".

On offer will be spare parts and complete vehicles in both the vintage car and modern classic categories, and visitors will have the opportunity to search for parts as well as for special bargains among the complete vehicles on sale.

This is a place to meet up with old friends and make new ones. Where older and more experienced bikers feel young again, and where young motorbike enthusiasts can find replacement parts and starter models.

If Carl Benz were able to come across today from his little workshop in Mannheim to the huge VETERAMA site and could see the efforts that people of all ages are making to keep the history of the combustion engine alive with all their automobile rarities, he would certainly be proud of what he created with the invention of the motor car.

"It's nice to see one another again and meet up, and we get the chance to spend three whole days searching through boxes on tables and trailers to find all those hidden treasures."

Spaces for exhibitors on the VETERAMA site have almost all been taken. But there is still one field where those who were a bit late coming to a decision should be able to find a space. And there are also still a few spaces available in the hall.

Looking forward to seeing you there! – VETERAMA, 13 - 15 October in Mannheim.
